

AJJI : THE BOOK

To the One Who Waited to Read This — Ajji

Okay then—at last, I’ve started writing this book.

I know you were eager to read it, Ajji.

By the way... who is Ajji, and who am I?

Let’s begin this beautiful journey of two introverts—classmates, best friends, and future life leaders.

Chapter 1: Who am I?

Let me introduce the first introvert.

That’s me!

I’m Atharv (aka AJJA), the writer of this book.

How do I even begin to introduce myself?

There’s not much to say... but maybe there’s everything too.

So, I was born in Maharashtra, in a middle-class family.

Did my schooling in Haveri, Karnataka, and now I’m chasing my engineering dreams in Davangere.

Let’s rewind a little.

AJJI : THE BOOK

I was that kid with a crazy fun childhood—doing all the naughty stuff (tarlee, you know), getting scolded by my parents, but still smiling wide at the end of the day. (Still happy now, by the way—just with a few more scars and stories.)

I faced a lot growing up—family struggles, ups and downs.

But those challenges? They made me stronger. They taught me not to blame life, but to solve it.

I was your average student. Didn't love studying (who does, right?), but I wasn't dull either. I was the funny guy—always trying to make people laugh, mimic teachers, crack jokes, pull silly pranks.

I had a great gang. We made everything worse and better at the same time.

Chaos with love.

I loved dancing—performed at school gatherings and events.

I think I danced well, right Ajji?

I never talked to girls back then. I was surrounded by my boys, living that pure introvert life.

Dreaming big—world tours, new adventures, friendships yet to happen.

I was a listener. I didn't speak much, avoided fights, and anger never really lived inside me.

Even today, I don't know how to express anger. I'm calm. Like ice.

I scored an average percentage in my 10th boards—didn't get into any “good” PU college. But they say average students are usually good at something... and I think my strength was how I treated people.

That came from my mother—my biggest teacher.

She's the silent lead of this story. I'll tell you why... soon.

Alright, back to me again!

AJJI : THE BOOK

Childhood was wild, messy, full of laughs—and honestly, a blessing.

Now... let's talk about a milestone.

My first best girlfriend.

Yeah, you read that right. Not a love story (yet), just a casual friendship—but one that meant the world to me.

Because for someone like me—who never spoke to a single girl in school—talking to a girl in engineering?

Bro, that was a legit achievement.

But wait—I won't dive into that story just yet.

There's still a bit more of "me" you should know.

I don't think I'm boring.

I'm honest. Straightforward.

I always stand by people when they need someone.

I don't make others' problems feel bigger with my presence—I try to make them lighter.

I have some amazing friends now. I love and respect every single one of them.

So yeah...

That was me. Not too much. Not too little. Just enough for now.

Let's meet again in the next chapter—

Chapter 2: The Story Begins

CHAPTER 2: THE NUMBER, A NEW CHAPTER

AJJI : THE BOOK

So, as you read the title, "The Number, A New Chapter", I know you might be wondering—what number? What chapter?

Be ready, AJJI, because the rollercoaster starts now, my Kali.

You already know about me and my past, now let's go with the flow. I had just entered my engineering life.

This wasn't really my passion, but I didn't have much of a choice, so I chose the course.

One day, while I was in Haveri searching for colleges, one of my mom's students—whose mother was a friend of my mom—suggested a college. She shared the contact number of her sister, Savitha Mamadapur, and told my mom that this college was good and I should join.

I agreed.

That's how I ended up in Jain Institute of Technology, Davangere, and I chose Electronics and Communication Engineering.

Honestly? The first time I saw the college, I thought, "There's no way this place will be fun." But oh man... fun hit harder than expected—you'll see that later.

So I got admitted and was kind of excited to make new connections (only with boys, of course).

I joined the hostel. It felt like luxury to me—free Wi-Fi, 24/7 water, a playing area. It was "woww"—until I stayed there long enough to realize hostel life isn't that easy.

Then came my first day of college.

AJJI : THE BOOK

I wore this blue-colored sweatshirt for the induction program held for first-year students. I walked into the auditorium, heart full of excitement, ready to see new people, new teachers, and a whole new vibe.

Now, AJJI hasn't entered yet.

On day one, I wasn't thinking about girls. My only goal was to make a solid first impression—to show that I had arrived.

And I think... I nailed it. People remembered my name from that day.

Now comes her entry.

The gorgeous, silent, stunning girl. But hold up—I didn't notice her first. She noticed me. She saw me on stage, introducing myself.

Later, after the induction, we were being taken around the campus to visit various departments. Our first stop? Mechanical branch.

As I stepped into the class, something happened.

My heart skipped a beat. My breath caught for a second. And my mind? Totally lost.

Because that's when she walked in.

AJJI.

Wearing glasses. Looking absolutely gorgeous.

And in that moment, my heart whispered this verse:

ಮೊದಲ ಬಾರಿಗೆ ನೋಟ ಬಿಡ್ತಾ ಗ ನನ ಹೃದಯದ ತಾಳವೇ ಬದಲಾಗಿತ್ತು , ಅವಳ ಒಂದು ನೋಟ,
ನನ ಖಿನ್ನವೇ ತಿರುಗಿತ್ತು .

ಕಣ್ಣು ಗಳಲ್ಲಿ ಕನಡಕ, ಚೆಲುವಿನ ಮಂಚು, ಅವಳು ಹಾದು ಹೋಗಿದೆಯೆನಿಸಿತ್ತ ಸಮಯವೇ ನಿಲ್ಲಿ
ಸು.

ನಾನು ನಿಂತಿದಾ ಹೌದು, ಆದರೆ ಕಾಲ ಹೋಗಿತ್ತು ಫುಫುವಾಗಿ, ನನ ದೃಷ್ಟಿ ಯಲಿಲಿಲಿ
ಮಾತನಾಡಿದಳು ಅವಳು – ಶ್ವಾ ವಿಲಿದ ಭಾಷೆಯಲ್ಲಿ .

ಅವಳು ಯೇ ಈ ಕಥೆಯ ನಾಯಕಿ, ನನ ಕನಸು, ನನ ಕಥೆ – ನನ ಅಜ್ಜಿ .

Okay, I'm not that filmy—but I added the poem because I was honestly mesmerized by her looks. I was flying high.

Then, I snapped back to reality.

My mind was like, “Bro, focus! You’ve got a whole life to settle!”

But my heart said, “Bro... this is the best kind of chaos.”

Stuck in that battle, I sat down, eager to know her name and branch.

And then it happened. She was in our branch!

AJJI : THE BOOK

It felt like God himself whispered to me, “Enjoy your life, Atharv.”

I was mentally doing bhangra. This stunning girl is in MY class?

Then, I heard her name. Her nickname was AJJI, but her full name—ANJALI.

And in that moment, I kid you not, I felt like SRK. I was Raj, and I had just found my Anjali.

But plot twist—I had zero confidence to talk to her. I wasn’t used to talking to girls.

My mind said, “Leave it, don’t embarrass yourself.”

But my heart? “You HAVE to talk to her. Just once. Look at her!”

This time—heart won.

So let’s talk about our subjects.

We had CAED – Computer Aided Engineering Drawing, which included lab sessions.

Guess what? She was in the same batch as mine.

My luck? 100%.

After the second lab session, my system had an error. The lab sir told me to shift—and he made me sit right beside AJJI.

Butterflies, bro. Real ones.

AJJI : THE BOOK

I was a step closer.

Now the actor inside me woke up. I knew how to do the drawings, but I made intentional mistakes... just to ask her for help.

And it worked.

We had our first few conversations. I got to know her a bit—she was great at studies (like every girl is, right?) But also really shy and quiet.

And again... my heart whispered, “You need to have a real conversation with her.”

After some lab sessions, I finally made up my mind and gathered full confidence. With a little nervousness, I asked her:

"Anjali, do you have electrical notes? Because I didn't get the notes. Can you share yours so that I can prepare for the internals?"

Boom! That moment felt magical. My heart was melting.

Now the title made sense—The Number, A New Chapter.

She smiled, pulled out her phone, and said, "I don't have the notes, I have a soft copy. I'll share it with you. Type your number."

My hands were shaking.

My heart whispered, "Is this really happening?"

AJJI : THE BOOK

That voice of hers—man, it was like music. It just melted me.

After that, she walked away, and I was heading downstairs when my phone buzzed.

A message.

Her message.

I was literally dancing.

I thought, “Now there’s a chance... we’ll talk.”

But I was nervous. I didn’t know how to react. I thanked her sweetly.

And for weeks—we didn’t text again. Neither of us.

We just had a few more chats during lab sessions. Slowly, we were getting to know each other.

And your writer, this introvert, started developing a crush.

Yes, I was falling in love... for the first time in my life.

I didn’t know how. It just happened.

But then, the overthinking started.

That one word—"overthinking"—brought useless thoughts and some good ones too.

AJJI : THE BOOK

I'll talk about that in future chapters. But let's finish the story of the guy who was slowly, helplessly falling for AJJI.

Every time I saw her in class—me at the last bench, her at the second row—I looked at her like she was the ocean of love.

And her eyes? Bro... her eyes said everything.

Oh, speaking of which—there will be a full chapter on her eyes.

For now, here's a shayari, dedicated to those beautiful eyes:

तेरी आँखों की ज बात है, व लफ्जों में कहाँ बयों ह पाती है। हर बार जब तू देखे मुझे, ऐसा लगे जैसे पूरी कायनात मुस्कुरा जाती है।

Now, back to the story.

We slowly started chatting on WhatsApp. Carefully. Nervously. Cautiously.

I was afraid she'd think I was just another guy. So I was super careful with my words.

AJJI : THE BOOK

Eventually, I got more comfortable. I didn't even have an Instagram account then. But when she said, "You don't see reels?" I said, "Yes." (Though honestly, I didn't see many at the time. Now? We share reels like crazy.)

I had a business account, but somehow... that turned into a love account.

We had our best conversations on Instagram.

Then came July 17th.

Her birthday.

A day I'll never forget. A day a gorgeous girl was born.

It felt like a festival to me. I wanted to make her happy.

But we weren't that close yet.

Oh, and I missed one moment—during our lab sessions, my friends used to take pictures of me and her together and tease me with her name at the hostel.

Man, those were the blushing days.

Anyway—back to her birthday.

She wore a purple frock. She looked like a literal princess. Butterflies were going crazy in my stomach.

I wanted to wish her properly.

AJJI : THE BOOK

But when I went up to her... I LOST confidence.

Instead of shaking hands, I did a namaste and said “Happy Birthday.”

WHAT A FOOL I WAS.

I kept blaming myself for the whole day.

“Why did I do that? What must she be thinking?”

Later that day, when college was over, she was getting off the college bus. I helped her down.

That moment—when I touched her hand—I didn’t wash my hand until her perfume faded away.

I wished her again. This time—properly.

I complimented her dress, talked about her day.

AJJI : THE BOOK

The way she said “Thank you”...

It felt like my soul left my body.

You know everything till here.

Now, I’m a good friend of hers.

But it’s time to shift focus.

Next chapter, I’ll tell you about the other introvert—none other than AJJI herself.

See you in the next chapter—with love.

Ending this first ride of the rollercoaster

CHAPTER 4: WHEN LIFE STARTED GIVING MEANING

No time, no see, AJJI.

I am back with the ride of our memories – where we laughed, cried, and experienced sad moments together. And here we are, where you are turning 21!

See, I am younger than you, and now you are literally becoming AJJI (Dummi Rani).

With this, I am wishing you advance Happy Birthday to the person who is my whole world, my reason to write this book, the love of my life, my future wife, my “AJJI.”

Now, read the chapter name again:

“When life started giving meaning.”

This chapter will tell you how love is defined in my words, the love I was waiting for, the dream that came true. This is when life started giving me meaning, a purpose, a blessing.

So, let’s dive into this love journey, where you are the host of this chapter, and I am conveying my words with immense love. The love journey begins.

We started building trust by getting to know each other carefully – in moments when I was sad, angry, frustrated, loving, or overthinking. We both were trying to understand each other. In the beginning, we never overshared anything, whether it was about family issues or our own problems. But over time, we started becoming possessive about each other. In our language of love, “possessiveness” was our way of caring. It was never about doubting our trust.

Yes, I was totally over-possessive sometimes, which started creating issues in our relationship later. But that possessiveness was not a bad thing in our love; it was just a way to show how much we cared for each other. Like this, the bond and trust between us kept growing. (Sorry, AJJI.)

I was not fully ready to confess my love to you until I finished my 2nd year. I was waiting for the right time, a time when I knew you well in every situation. In this paragraph, I want to tell you why I proposed to you so late, AJJI.

While I was in my second year, the thought of a relationship did cross my mind, but we were best friends then. I didn’t want to disturb this friendship because it allowed us to know each other deeply without expectations. After the 2nd year, our bond became very strong. Slowly, we started sharing our problems, our past, and our goals.

I was going with the flow, but after some time, I felt it would be better to share my feelings with you. I carefully thought through everything I wanted to say before I proposed. I made this decision because I had now seen how AJJI reacts in different situations, how to keep her happy with more care and love, and what she was looking for in her future partner.

I tried my best to fulfil your dreams and your wishes so that I could become the best partner you were looking for.

Let me not dive too deep into the story just yet. Let's refresh our memories, AJJI.

Do you remember the first thing you gave me?

Yes, the bangle with Mickey Mouse's face that you made yourself. I will never forget the moment you gave it to me in the canteen while we were chatting. That bangle became like a lucky charm for me. I carry it with me everywhere so that I feel you are always with me. Later, I also took your handkerchief that you used during the fresher's party.

Those are the best gifts of my life. Whenever I look at them, I feel you. The fragrance of you lingers on them, and I fall in love all over again.

Now, let's talk about our first fashion show, our first Shrungha together.

I have always been an introvert, but when I thought about having you as my partner in the fashion show, my confidence was at its highest, and my happiness was at its peak.

I remember every step we practiced together. The first time I hugged you while practicing – that was the first time we got so close. We became physically comfortable with each other, though we were shy at first. But when you held my hand, I felt confident and gave it my best.

Then came the show day. You wore a black dress with black pants and heels, your eyeliner like waves of the ocean in your eyes. The way you walked just took my breath away. I wore a black suit for the first time, and we looked great together. I held your hand at every moment while walking down the stairs, carrying your bag with me.

That was the second time I met your parents and sisters. I was sweating while talking to them, but the smile on your face that day made everything worth it.

When the fashion show began, and it was my turn, my Dummi Rani made a small mistake – you accidentally came into the row where I was standing. I think my love pulled you towards me (blushing, yeah). But that accident turned into a happy moment, and then we walked together. The noise, the whistles – everything went silent for me while I was walking with you. I felt like I had conquered everything in life.

The best moment of our two, right AJJI?

AJJI : THE BOOK

These moments are unforgettable. We were so happy back then, and now we are even happier. Those memories will always be cherished.

Now, let's get back to the story of proposing to you, AJJI.

Let me take a breath.

The moment that changed my life completely, the moment that started giving my life a purpose.

The date was 29th November.

We were preparing for Ethnic Day, you and I. And here comes me, the possessive boy. Some juniors were teasing you while we were working, and I couldn't tolerate it. At that moment, I thought it would be the best time to share my feelings with you.

That evening, we were going to your house to keep the things we prepared for Ethnic Day. We were carrying the small Krishna palace we made. We were so blessed that day.

It was the first time I saw your house, and you insisted I come in to have some tea. Your sister prepared tea while you helped her. During that time, I was talking to your mother (my future mother-in-law, hehe). I tried to impress her with my words, and I think I made a good impact on her that day, didn't I, AJJI?

Later, we left your house and returned to college as we had some work left. While I was dropping you home, I took you to the Sai Baba temple. That was when I felt a voice in my head telling me it was the right time to propose to you, and I think even God gave me a "yes" that day.

While we were praying, you started to cry. You gave excuses, saying your eyes were burning because of the incense, but the truth was you were emotional seeing a little girl praying with her father. It touched your heart deeply.

After that, I took you back home, and suddenly my heart started beating so fast. I think it was around 7:45 PM. I was nervous but asked you to stay for a minute.

And then, this introverted, shy boy finally expressed his feelings to the love of his life – my AJJI.

I asked you whether you liked me, and you replied that you would give your answer the next day at the function. My heart was still beating fast, but I also needed that time, and so did you.

AJJI : THE BOOK

The next morning, you came to college with your father and sister in the car. Let me take a moment to describe your beauty in that saree:

Wrapped in your saree, every smile you wore,
Stole the rhythm of my heartbeat quietly.
When you walked softly in that moment,
You looked like a painting God made patiently.
The sparkle in your lake-deep eyes,
The fragrance in your flowing hair that day,
I just kept looking at you, lost,
As you settled into every breath, every sway.

You looked so beautiful that day, and I was eagerly waiting for your decision. After the event, you changed into a simple kurta, and at around 5 PM, I proposed to you with a nervous voice.

At first, you were shocked and said it was “just an attraction.” I had no words, but when I explained everything from my heart, you believed me and even accepted my marriage proposal.

For the first time in many years, I cried. Finally, I got the love of my life. You were happy too, and we spoke about our future, our responsibilities, and our dreams.

YES, at last, we were in love.

A love that we both can't define because it is infinite, growing day by day.

Ahhhhh, AJJI, wasn't this story a total mixed masala?!
But these are the most beautiful moments of our lives.

Whenever I think about them, I sometimes cry, and sometimes I laugh a little louder. It's still unbelievable to me that I, an introvert who never talked to girls, found the love of my life.
Wow.

I am still shocked, AJJI, that you accepted my proposal.

So, this was your surprise, AJJI. To tell you honestly, I would never get a better girl than you.

I love you, AJJI.

(This time, with full happiness, not nervous.)

AJJI : THE BOOK

HAPPY 21ST BIRTHDAY TO YOU, AJJI.

This book is just a small part of our love, captured in the form of memories. We have many more years to go together, to build this bond even stronger. And this Kadii Raja, your Ajja, will do anything for your happiness and your smile.

Chapter 5: The Final Year!!!!!!

Long time no see, Ajjiii...

It's been many days, right? Finally, I'm writing a new chapter.

Okay, before you think this is the end — no, my love — this is just the beginning. There are many more chapters to go, both in real life and in this book that's dedicated to you, my Ajji.

Ahhh, the title "The Final Year" hits differently, doesn't it, bangaraa? We went through so many things together — struggles, love, endless care, fights, new challenges, new people, and a bond that grew stronger every single day.

It's like a whole movie, Ajjiii — filled with ups and downs, laughter and tears, lessons and love. We felt sad, we cried together, we shared everything, we loved blindly, and we learned to face life more maturely. But when we look back at this time, I know we'll cherish it forever — the days we spent joking around, getting serious about our future, preparing for placements, and working on our academic projects.

I'm literally crying while typing this, Ajji. When I think of who I was back in PU and who I've become now, I feel proud. I found my life partner — you — and I'm giving you all my love, building trust, and learning what true care means.

You know, I've always been a shy guy, bangaraa. But whenever I see you, I break my limits. I do everything possible just to make you smile — just to see my world (you, Ajji) happy. You taught me so much — how to love, how to care, how to respect women. Every single day, I became a better version of myself because of you.

This chapter might sound emotional, Ajji, but when I think of you — it's just love, love, love, and more love.

Do you remember that moment when I removed your drushti in the field? I couldn't believe I was doing that ritual myself. I was scared and tensed because you were so sick and couldn't handle the fever. But I took your drushti and threw every bit of evil away from you, praying for your recovery.

There are so many memories, Ajji, that I replay in my head whenever I feel lonely — your look when you want me to shut up, that little attitude you show while adjusting your hair, every step you take with me, every laugh that turns into tears of joy. Every one of those moments lives in my heart like a beautiful movie — where you and I are the main characters, and our love is endless.

When I look at this book, I sometimes feel like I'm just a writer imagining a girl in his life and expressing his emotions through words. But then I realize how lucky I am — I'm not imagining. I'm actually living it with you, bangaraa. These words don't come from my mind, Ajji; they flow straight from my heart.

When you went to Bangalore, I felt two emotions — happiness and tension. I was so happy because you were going there for your placement event, working hard for your dreams. But at the same time, I was tensed — “How will my Ajji manage? I’m not there with her.”

But then I realized — it’s God’s plan, bangaraa. He told me, “Let her go, Atharv. She’s a strong girl, and she will love you every single moment of her life. You can’t always be together physically, but your love will always be there, no matter the distance.”

This is just a hard phase, but it will pass. Soon, we’ll meet again and live a beautiful life together — as husband and wife.

Ajjiii, whenever I express my feelings through this book, let me tell you how it feels... When I type, I literally imagine you beside me — resting your head on my shoulder, teasing me with your hair, and hugging me tightly. That’s how I feel every time I write, Ajji — as if you’re right here with me.

I think this is the most emotional chapter, because now we’re in that tough part of our story. But we’re the main characters, remember? And main characters always win in the end, bangaraa. We’ll overcome every hard time and build a successful, happy life together.

But hey — in every serious situation, I always find a way to make you laugh, right? So let’s refresh some memories... our bike rides to your home, that kiss we shared at night, the way we held hands and felt the whole world stop for a moment, and yes — the teasing, the play fights, and those moments when you pinched me so hard I almost screamed, Ajjiii!

Abba bangaraaa... let me tell you in some poetic words, Ajji.

In every tear, your smile I find,
Through every storm, our hearts align.
Distance may test, but love won’t fade,
You’re my calm when dreams cascade.
Ajji, you’re my forever — beautifully made.

I love you in every situation, Ajji — even during those painful moments when you’re on your periods. I know it hurts, bangaraa, and whenever you text me “pain bala ede ajji”, my heart aches too. I just wish I could be there beside you — to come to your home, cook for you, feed you with love, and take care of you through those painful days.

I’d hold you close, kiss your forehead, tell you sweet stories, hug you gently, and give you a peaceful sleep. I’d take away all your pain, Ajji — my love would heal every bit of it.

I’m eagerly waiting for that day, bangaraa — when I’ll care for you during those days, handle your mood swings, make you laugh through your tears, and hold you so tight that even your pain gives up. But this is not the end, Ajji... these are just the phases of our journey.

AJJI : THE BOOK

These tough times won't last forever — achhe din ayenge, bangaraa. The love we imagined will soon become reality. This title — "The Final Year" — isn't the end; it's just a small full stop before we start a new paragraph in our life.

I was literally crying while writing this, Ajji. My heart whispered — "You're too sensitive, Ajja, but that's your strength. You'll make her the happiest woman alive."

I know, one day, we'll get everything we've wished for — we'll make our parents proud, we'll build a beautiful life, and we'll have two little angels to call our own. Our love will be like oxygen — something we can't live without, something that flows in every heartbeat.

So, this chapter isn't over yet, my love.

Before I pause my words here, let me tell you one last thing, Ajji —

You are the best lover, the best friend, and the most beautiful life partner God has ever given me. And I promise, I'll prove that I'm the best husband, best friend, and best soulmate God created for you, bangaraa.

Thank you for everything, Ajji — for your care, for your love, for simply being you. I'll always be thankful for every little thing you do for me, my wifey Ajji.

Always in your heart,

Your handsome hubby — AJJA

Chapter 6: 1 Year, 77 Days... and Still Continuing to Infinity □...

We are here together — creating beautiful memories from our college days and now moving forward to create new ones. We are taking our first steps toward our careers. It's a little exciting, Ajji... but at the same time, we feel sad that our college life ended so soon.

Sometimes we think, “What if we had one more year? We could enjoy more, create more memories together...”

Ahhh... but life moves with time, and we must move with it too, right Ajji? Whenever I think about our college days, I realize what a joyful ride it was — full of ups and downs, sadness and happiness, winning and losing, sometimes anger, but love... always love.

We studied for exams together, followed crazy schedules, laughed at silly things, and enjoyed every little moment. We are going to miss it a lot, Ajji.

Now, when we look at the silent rooms, packed bags, and say goodbye to that beautiful chapter, it makes me emotional. One day, these memories will hit us suddenly — and we will both laugh and cry remembering them.

But no worries. We are never apart. The distance may be big, but our hearts are always together, Ajji.

This is not the end. We have so much life ahead of us.
We will marry each other.

We will build our own home and property.
We will have two cute kids.

We will travel the world.

We will make our parents proud.

We will grow our AM innovation and create active income from it.

We will save money, grow it, and build a beautiful life together, Bangaraa.
We are not alone, Ajji. We are together.

We will build our trust stronger every day.

We will love more.

We will kiss more (virtually for now... hee hee).

Handu, this patience test is the final and most powerful test. If we pass this, we will be one of the strongest couples in the world — and our marriage will become even easier and stronger.

It's almost a year since I started writing this book for you, Ajji. I am very, very happy that I am your best friend, your lover, your future husband, and your lifetime partner.

You are the best thing that has ever happened to me, Ajji.
I hope I made it count — my love, my care, my kisses — everything that made you feel protected and comfortable with me.

Today, as I write this on Valentine's Day for you, I know we are far — almost 800 km apart. But my love for you keeps growing every single day.
Our routines have changed.

Our schedules have changed.

We are living among new people, learning new experiences.
Yet, even in this busy life, we crave each other more. We miss each other more.
We love each other more.
We talk about our days.
We gossip.
We fight sometimes.
But we always cherish the memories we created — the best part of our lives, where we enjoyed, worked hard, and grew together.
I love you more, Ajji.

Ahhhh... how fast the days pass, right?
Once we were studying for exams, and now we are corporate employees. But during this phase, we are learning things that will build our bright future.
One thing is sure — we are working hard for our full-time positions. One day, we will receive that offer letter that pushes us forward in life... and closer to our marriage.

This chapter is about my feelings toward our long-distance relationship.
Understanding is our biggest strength, and we will keep growing it. We will improve our communication, support each other, and become better versions of ourselves.

I am very proud of you, Ajji.
Whenever we talk about our work, we are the only ones who genuinely feel happy about what we do. We are trying our best. Even though we are introverts, we are handling ourselves among new people with courage and confidence.

And we will keep growing — together. □
